DEAD ON THE TRACK

NEWBURGH MAN FOUND TUESDAY MORNING

On Tuesday morning George Frederick Hill, a well-known resident of Newburgh, a former clerk in the Ryan store, but latterly employed by the Strathcona Paper Co., was found on the railway track near Newburgh station.
Deceased had probably been walking in his sleep and was hit by a passing train, as he was clad only in pyamas, a sweater and socks.
One foot was severed from the body, and a severe wound showed on his forehead.
His home is situated next to the Newburgh High School, near the track, and a quarter of a mile from were the body was found.
When found the body was still warm, and though inquiries are proceeding the authorities have not yet found which train hit him.
Mr. Hill was one of Newburgh's most popular citizens, a member of the school board, a mason, and one of the wardens of the Anglican church.
He was about fifty years of age, and leaves a wife and four children, three girls and one boy.
A coroner's inquest will be held to inquire into the cause of his death.

NAPANEE MURDER OCCURRED YEAR AGO

A year ago to-day (August 28th) Napanee and the district was stirred by the murder of Night Constable Richard A. Beard. The latter was shot when shortly after midnight, he entered a laneway in the rear of Smith's jewellery store, following a report he received that some person or persons were endeavoring to break into the store. Fred Bryant and Erwood and Sherwood Upton, now serving time in the Portsmouth penitentiary, are charged with the killing of the constable, and come up before the supreme court sessions at Kingston next month.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

The following is the time table for the Supplementary Examinations:
Departmental and Matriculation: Sept. 11th, French; Sept. 12th, Geom. and English Comp.; Sept. 13th, Alg. and English Lit.; Sept. 14th, Phys., Anc. Hist. and Trig.; Sept. 15th, Chem. and British Hist.; Sept. 18th, Latin; Sept. 19th, German, Botany and Zoology; Sept. 20th, Greek.
Examinations will be held at University of Toronto, Queen's University, Kingston; McMaster University, Toronto; and Western University, London, and at any other centre in the Province, provided that the candiadtes apply before September 14, and undertake to pay the additional fees for presiding.
For the September examinations the fee shall be $1.00 per paper, payable to the Department at the time of application. If an examination centre should be established at Napanee the additional fees for presiding would be calculated as follows, such fees to be paid to the Presiding Officer at the time of the examination: Where the amount of the examination fees paid by the candidates is less than twice the cost of the presiding, the additional fees will be $3.00 for any half day, when only one candidate is writing; $2.00 for any half day, when only two candidates are writing; and $1.00, when only three candidates are writing.
If candidates from the Napanee Collegiate Institute will write on at Napanee, it will be possible to make an estimate as to the additional fees, if any, required to hold the examination in this centre. Candidates from other schools who desire to write at Napanee should communicate with J. Corkill, B.A., or M. R. Reid, B.A., Sharbot Lake, but no matter where the candidate resides, or wherever he may desire to write, application must be made to the Department of Education, and if possible before Sept. 1st. Later than this an additional fee will be required.

Candidates at the recent Departmental Examinations who failed in one or more subjects are urgently requested to communicate with the Principal, Dr. S. W. Morden, if they desire to take up work at the Napanee Collegiate Institute this coming term so that they may ascertain on what subjects they should write at the Supplemental Examinations in September Promotion and in the Lower School—from Lower School to Middle School—and in Middle School, will be allowed to write at the next Supplemental Examinations and have passed in all but one subject.
Those pupils who failed in only one subject in July should try the Supplemental Examination in Sept., in order to assure themselves the right promotion. Those who failed in more than one subject must try to pass off some of the subjects at the Supplemental Examination to retain their present standing or to become entitled to promotion.
Candidates who wrote on Normal Entrance or Pass Matriculation and failed in more than one subject and who have tried the Supplemental Examination will be either promoted to Upper School or allowed to take Upper School subjects to complete their programme of studies.
Regardless of the number of subjects on which the pupil has to write at the examination in September, no pupil will be required to carry a full programme.
The following pupils of Upper School who took the Upper School Examinations are requested to send in their certificates to the Principal in order that a record may be made for the Collegiate of the results of the examinations. The certificate will be returned. Mary Davy, Edith Allison, Marion Wales, Evelyn Sheridan, Alice Alexander, Beatrice Armstrong, Helen Loyst, Marguerite McGuire, Queenie Paul, Winnifred Turner.

Sporting Goods.

YARKER

Yarker was visited by the largest crowd on Tuesday, Aug. 22nd, that the Orange celebration was held here some few years ago. This was the occasion of the final championship game between Sydenham and Wolfe Island for the honors in Frontenac group, Inter-County League. Widespread interest was aroused throughout the counties of Lennox, Addington and Frontenac. The Sydenham boys came over here on Monday afternoon and held a good practice on the local diamond, while the Wolfe Islanders, who arrived here from the first ferry to Kingston in the morning, had a practice as well before the game started.
Many visitors saw Yarker for the first time, while the fans were in attendance in large numbers to support their respective teams. When the game was called, the first ball thrown across the plate was hit and went through the windshield of J. Lindsay's car. Wolfe Island early went into the lead and it looked like an easy win for them. However, the Sydenham team gradually surged ahead and emerged winners by the score of 10 to 9.

MOSCOW NORTH

A number attended the harvest home dinner at Fifth Lake on Wednesday, the 23rd of August, and report a fine time.
Mrs. Wellesley Coulter returned home on Saturday from the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, where she underwent a successful operation on her throat by Dr. C. E. O'Connor.
Mrs. Sandford Degroff returned home after attending her mother's funeral at Watertown, N. Y.
Mrs. Nelson Bell, Enterprise, spent Tuesday afternoon with Wellesley Coulter.
Miss Ila Reid is spending some time with her brother, Charles, at Belleville.
Mrs. Garnet Huffman spent Wednesday with her mother, Mrs. Edwin McKim.
Mr. and Mrs. Stan. King, of Rochester, is spending some time with relatives.
Mrs. C. Oderkirk and family are visiting her mother, Mrs. Sampson King.
The stone crusher is at work and it is hoped that the roads will be put in better shape.
Mr. and Mrs. Norman Jackson were in Napanee on Wednesday evening.
Mr. and Mrs. Foster spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Fred VanVolkenburg.

FAMILY PICNIC

The annual gathering of the Allison's took place on the 16th of August in Mr. Thos. Allen's grove, on the shore of the Bay of Quinte, a beautiful spot near the village of Adolphustown. A part of the grove was occupied by fishermen, with their tents, shacks, and reels, which added to the romantic scenery of the place. A party from Toronto, Ont., was also camping there.
The Allison party numbered about sixty (60), most of them from the surrounding district. The guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Allison, of Port Perry, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Ward Allison, New Orleans, La.; Miss Kate Allison, Winona, Minn.; Mrs. Will. Groves, and Mrs. D. W. Allison, Toronto, Ont.; Mrs. H. W. Brant-combe, Dr. Gerald Allison, and Master Conger Allison, Picton, Ont.; Mrs. Drury, London, Ont.; Mrs. J. Lemy, and three daughters, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. J. Bolton, Montreal, Que.; Miss Isabel and Master Wm. Allison, Camden, N.J.; Mr. and Mrs. John N. Roblin, Sackett's Harbour, N.Y.; Miss Edna Allison, Honolulu; T. H. and Mr. Jack Allison, Napanee, Ont.
Dinner was served at 1.30 p.m., after which an article was read by "Mammie Betty" of the forefathers of the Allison families, which was much enjoyed by all.
Short speeches followed, then games were indulged in, and a swimming match ended the day's pleasures. Prizes were given, not for their intrinsic value, but merely souvenirs, and all seemed pleased and happy with the reunion.
The busy threshing machine in the neighborhood prevented a few from attending, which, of course, we all regreted, but most of us were there.
After singing Auld Lang Syne, the party broke up and all returned to their respective homes, hoping to meet again, the 3rd Wednesday in August, 1923.

ENTERPRISE

An event of considerable interest took place on Wednesday, August 9th, when the members of Enterprise Ladies' Aid Society met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Loucks to express to the latter their esteem and appreciation for her valuable advice, and express their regret of her inability to be present with them at their regular meetings. After a very social time being spent together the ladies were called to order and the following address was read by Mrs. German Wagar, after which Mrs. Loucks was presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers by Mrs. Norman Jackson:

Dear Mrs. Loucks—

We, the Ladies' Aid Society of Enterprise ethodist church, have met to spend an afternoon with you, thereby to remind you of our esteem and our sympathy for you in your affliction.
We remember your faithfulness to our Society, and the work of the church in general, throughout the many long years which Providence has granted to you. Surely you have earned our Lord's commendation, even as Mary did, "she hath done what she could." In no better way could we think of honoring these years of faithful service than by placing your name upon our roll as a life member, trusting that it may be a new link in our bond of union. And although you may not be permitted to meet with us in our regular meetings, yet we pray that as the times come round you will remember that you are one with us, and that you will assist us by your prayers as we endeavor to carry on our work, till we shall each hear the Master say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Signed on behalf of the Ladies' Aid:

Mrs. German Wagar.
Mrs. Norman Jackson,
President.
Mrs. Grover Wagar,
Secretary.

Lunch was then served, snap shots taken of the gathering and matron of honor, and the visitors dispersed, wishing Mrs. Loucks bon voyage through life.

Seals on Documents.

In the early ages, when hardly any one knew how to read or write, it was the custom for people to affix their seal to a document to make it official and legal. Affixing their seals, in those days, took the place that a signature does now. Even now the great seal is attached to all British royal proclamations and ordinances; and without it they would not become law or be considered to have the king's authority. The words "Given under our seal" occur in all of them. That is the reason why James II. of England, when fleeing from London on being dethroned, threw the great seal into the Thames. He thought the new king would not be able to make any fresh laws until a new seal had been provided; but a fisherman fished the seal up in his net a day or two later and so no harm was done. The popes of Rome used to seal their decrees in lead instead of wax, which gained for them the name of papal bulls, from bulla, lead. The first English king to use a seal was Edward the Confessor.

MOLIERE.

Tercentenary of French Dramatist Being Celebrated.

"The Italians had completed the celebration of the sixth century since the death of Dante, when all France began to celebrate the third century since the birth of Moliere," says Mr. Frederic Harrison in the Fortnightly Review.

"What Dante is to the Italian world, what Shakespeare is to the English-speaking world, that Moliere is to the French world of thought. Strictly speaking the anniversary of the birth, unless it be that of a divine being, has no special importance compared with that of the anniversary of death. But as France will not wait until 1973 to honor the memory of her national poet, we must accept her decision, and so in the New Year offered our tribute with hers to Jean Baptiste Poquelin, dit Moliere, who was born in the Rue St. Honore in Paris, in January, 1622.

"There is a strange similarity in the personal careers of Moliere and Shakespeare, widely apart as were their genius and their art. Both were essentially actors and dramatists, theatre-owners, and stage-managers. All their dramatic works were written for the stage, not for the library. Both were intensely hard and rapid writers, often throwing off in haste rough and even patched pieces which they never cared to revise or to own. Both were beloved by their friends and their comrades, both were most generous, manly and honorable.

"His masterpieces may be grouped as 'Les Precieuses,' 'L'Ecole des Femmes,' 'Les Femmes Savantes,' 'Tartuffe,' 'Le Misanthrope,' and I rank them in that order: beginning with the gay, and then passionate, invective against the affectation of female society, passing to a grave and exquisitely-studied lecture on woman's education, thence to a burning satire of religious superstition and clerical hypocrisy, and, finally, to almost tragic indignation at the hard lot of the truthful and honest men in the midst of a frivolous and false society. The delicious satire on the vicious poetry of a degenerate age is in itself a model of literary judgment. If "Tartuffe" be the play which on the stage is the most brilliant drama, 'Misanthrope' to the thoughtful reader is a lesson in ethics, a manual of moral uprightness.

"The productions of Moliere's pen is one of the mysteries of literature. In his short life, some fifteen years of incessant work, he produced more than thirty plays, of which at least seventeen were in the rigid formulas of Alexandrine rhyme. And this prodigious output, more than half of which was made under the fantastic and arbitrary rules of French verse, was concocted whilst the poor poet was torn asunder by the troubles of his theatre, its properties, its personnel, and its liabilities."

Cavemen Astronomers.

Did pre-historic man study astronomy? This was the question put before the French Academy of Sciences recently by Prof. Bigourdan, who stated that Dr. Baudoin, the eminent French geologist, had found cave drawings made by prehistoric cavemen representing the constellation of the Pleiades. These drawings all showed a group of ten stars. Modern astronomers can discern only seven stars in this constellation with the naked eye. The 10 stars are visible only from the summit of a high mountain or with the aid of a telescope. Prof. Bigourdan pointed out that in these circumstances it seemed a legitimate question to ask if the cavemen were not sufficiently acquainted with astronomy to know that from a height it was possible to see more stars than from the lowland. The only other alternatives would be that primitive men had far clearer eyesight or that the Pleiades had considerably decreased in brilliancy.

FINANCE MINISTERS.

Nine Men Have Held That Office Since Confederation.

Finance has played a large part in the political history of the Dominion, and the Ministers of Finance have been exceptionally prominent in a number of the Cabinets since Confederation. Hon. W. S. Fielding has served longest in that office, having held the portfolio from 1896 to 1911, or during the whole of the Laurier regime. He returned to that post near the end of 1921, ripened in years and experience, and facing a period more critical in the country's finance than at any previous time.

Sir Alexander Galt, who was the first Finance Minister after Confederation, had held that position from 1858 to 1862, and from 1864 to 1867, in different Cabinets of the old Province of Canada, and remained for a few months after Confederation. His chief work was done in 1859, when, after he had made a considerable advance in the scale of duties on unenumerated articles, he came into controversy with the British authorities, and took occasion to assert Canada's fiscal independence in a manner which made history for this country. The merchants of Sheffield haft protested against the increase of Canadian duties, but Galt replied to the Duke of Newcastle, who had forwarded the protest:

"The Government of Canada, acting for its Legislature and people, cannot, through those feelings of deference which they owe to the Imperial authorities, in any measure waive or diminish the right of the people of Canada to decide for themselves both as to the mode and extent to which taxation should be imposed. Self-government would be utterly annihilated if the views of the Imperial Government were to be preferred to those of the people of Canada."

Sir John Rose, who succeeded Galt in the portfolio, gave way in 1869 to Sir Francis Hincks, and just before the fall of the Macdonald Government in 1873 Sir Leonard Tilley held the office for three months. Sir Richard Cartwright acted during the Mackenzie regime until 1878, and then came another term for Tilley until 1885. It fell to Sir Leonard to introduce, early in 1879, the higher tariff known as the National Policy, upon which the Conservatives had been returned to office.

Sir Charles Tupper followed for three years, until he took the post of High Commissioner in London. Then came Sir George Foster, serving under a succession of Conservative Prime Ministers until the defeat of the party in 1896. Mr. Fielding's first administration was memorable for the introduction of the British preferential tariff. Sir Thomas White had the burden of war financing, holding the office from 1911 to 1919, and Sir Henry Drayton filled in until the Liberals took office last year.

TREASURER'S SALE OF LANDS FOR TAXES

County of Lennox and Addington,
To Wit :

By virtue of a warrant under the hand of the Warden and seal of the County of Lennox and Addington, bearing date the Tenth Day of July, A.D., 1922, and to me directed, commanding me to levy upon the lands mentioned in the following list for arrears of taxes due thereon, and the costs as therein set forth.

I HEREBY GIVE NOTICE that unless the said arrears and costs are sooner paid, I shall proceed to sell the said lands, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the aforesaid taxes and costs, at the Court House, in the Town of Napanee, on WEDNESDAY, the 25th DAY OF OCTOBER, A.D., 1922, beginning at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon, and in compliance with the Assessment Act.

Should any of the aforementioned lands remain unsold they will be again offered at an adjourned sale to be held on Wednesday, the 22nd day of November, for any price they will bring. The municipalities directly concerned give notice of their intention to purchase, if taxes are not fully covered, or for any sum they may deem advisable.

The public will please remember that this is a strictly CASH sale. Private cheques will not be accepted unless MARKED by the bank upon which they are drawn and must be at par here.

Non-patented, or any lands in which the Crown has an interest will be sold subject to those provisions.

W. J. SHANNON,
Treasurer of the County of Lennox and Adington.

Dated at Napanee this 10th day of July, 1922.

Betting Illegal But Flourishing

Not in the history of racing in Canada has the betting part of the game received so much advertising as it has this summer. It seems probable that this publicity has resulted in a greater amount of gambling, because there are many people who would be indifferent to a right or privilege until they thought it was about to be withdrawn and then would hasten to exercise it. No doubt if the sale of chewing tobacco were to be prohibited, and act to come into effect next week, hundreds of people who never chewed tobacco in their lives would lay in a few hanks of it in case of emergency. The betting in Canada, of course, is done by means of the pari-mutual machines, except that part which is carried on by the illicit bookmakers. In Kentucky and Maryland, too, the betting through machines is legalized. In New York betting is illegal, and therefore does not exist openly, but we have no doubt that there is much more money bet in New York than is bet in Ontario.

Betting could not be carried on to any considerable extent if it were not for the connivance of the police. It certainly could not be conducted on such a scale that the odds are posted with each race and published in every newspaper that carries betting news. For a couple of years horse racing was dead in New York because of law which made the directors of the race tracks personally responsible for any gambling done on the premises. When this law was in force the tracks shut their gates. When it was repealed, without the law forbidding betting being repealed, the tracks reopened and have been enjoying tremendous prosperity ever since, even though the Jockey Club and the track owners did not derive a dollar in revenue from the betting, which amounts to hundreds of thousands of dollars a day. The Jockey Club does not recognize betting officially, but it is well known that if a man make a bet with a bookmaker and loses and does not pay, or if a bookmaker weishes, he finds the numerous private detectives taking a curious interest in his affairs, to the effect that he finds it impossible to bet again.

This is one of the reasons why there are so few losses in the tremendous and illicit business of betting in the United States. The bookmakers, from the big operators, who will accept $10,000 on the nod, to the little fellow, who takes a two-dollar bet, do not lose more than two per cent. of the money entrusted them, according to a writer in the New York Herald. There is an old convention that a gambling debt, since it cannot be collected at law, is a debt of honor, and thus must be paid before any other debt. This tradition and the activity of the private detectives protect the bookmaker from serious loss. Of course, the bookmakers and their numerous assistants, scouts and runners will not bet with every stranger who appears. But it is easy enough to find someone who knows them and will vouch for the stranger. Once accredited, he can have a credit of thousands of dollars. A note from Bill Smith to Bill Jones, the track bookmaker, presented by Bill Thompson, will result in Jones saying to Thompson, "All right, Mr. Thompson, as much as you like."

Mr. Thompson picks a horse and maybe bets $500. Mr. Jones makes a note of the affair. Nobody signs any document; no money changes hands. If Mr. Thompson wins, he will leave his address with the bookmaker, and the next morning will receive a cheque for his winnings, which may amount to $5,000, or he may be paid cash on the spot, and this without having visibly risked a dollar or incurred any liability whatever. Sometimes it turns out that when Mr. Thompson bets he loses and does not liquidate, but this happens about once in fifty times, and the bookmakers are not greatly disturbed, since they make the odds, and the more they are cheated the narrower will be the odds they offer. These odds, by the way, are never as great as those to be had in the machines. The machine odds are the odds of public opinion; the bookmaker odds are those of private judgment, as modified by public opinion. On tracks where the unlawful bookmakers operate there is usually a conference among them in the morning and a general elastic agreement as to the opening odds, this agreement being founded on what they believe to be the chances of the various horses. After the opening odds there are likely to be rapid alterations due to the amount of money that is being placed on the different horses. The more money there is bet on a horse, the shorter is his price.

The greatest odds ever paid on an American track were those which rewarded the few backers of Wishing Ring, at Latonia, on June 17, 1912. Anyone who had a $2 ticket for first received $1,888.50; those who bet $2 for second received $444.60, and those who bet $2 for third drew down $172.60. Obviously, no bookmaker would even offer such odds, because the bettor who would bet $2 at a hundred to one would not bite at nine hundred to one. Two years earlier, at Lexington, a horse named Muzetta paid more than four hundred to one. These tremendous odds simply mean that only half a dozen people out of a thousand bettors thought the horse would win, and the half dozen divided among them the money wagered on other horses by the mob, for mutuel betting is pool betting, in which the bettor backs his judgment against that of other bettors, not against the collective wisdom of the bookmakers.

Capt. Bernier.

Capt. Bernier, the explorer, who was born at L'Islet, Quebec, went to sea at the age of 12, and has commanded half a hundred different vessels. He held Government positions at Quebec and Levis for a number of years before taking up Arctic exploration. His greatest service on his many trips has been in giving some definition to the vast Arctic bounds of the Dominion.

"We went out fourteen months ago," he said, on returning from one of his recent voyages, "loaded down with food, coal and the necessaries of life. We come back to-day with our lockers empty, but loaded with information, the fruits of observation and experience, which, I am sure, will be of great service to Canada and to humanity at large in years to come. All that country in the north and westward which befors was marked on the map in a vague, uncertain kind of way we may now claim as a part of the Dominion of Canada. The Dominion extends to the North Pole. It is for us to claim it and make sure of it. That land, barren and bleak as it may seem, is for us to use in some way. In planting the British flag on North Lincoln I feel that I have claimed for Canada all islands as far north as 81 degrees 60 minutes. We may also lay claim to all land to the westward as far as Prince of Wales Land."

A Patriot Socialist.

If Emil Vanderveide of Belgium has really been done to death by the dark forces behind the soviet regime in Russia, then King Albert will have additional evidence of the fundamental distinctions between Belgian and Russian socialism. Vanderveide a Socialist, and held the Premiership as the leader of that party. That he was not a man to be put outside the pale of civilization is shown by the fact that his name appears on the Treaty of Versailles as signatory for his native land.

His sovereign, King Albert, has long been noted for a leaning toward socialism of a mild sort, and the two men, both patriots, were friends. Perhaps this friendship with royalty was one of the reasons for the unpopularity of Vanderveide among the Communists.

UNKNOWN BRASIL.

Wealthy Country Remains for Most Part Unexplored.

"Brasil contains a larger area of geographically unknown country than Africa or say any other part of the world," said F. C. Glass, who has spent thirty years in Brasil. During this time he traveled 25,000 miles.

Nine-tenths of Brasil is practically unknown to white men. There are tribes of forest aborigines who have never heard the word Brasil, know no government but their own, and have never seen the sea.

Mr. Glass is a missionary of the Evangelical Union of South America, and in pioneer work among the four hundred tribes of the Brazilian Amazon he has crossed Brazil at its north, centre, and south. He traveled 5,000 miles alone and unarmed among the Carajas people, who are of magnificent physique. Their staple diet is fish, shot with bow and arrow.

Part of this journey consisted of two months canoeing down the Arguay, a river the inner reaches of which are of untold magnificence.

The Carajas go unclothed, painting their bodies with bright vegetable colors. They have a custom of disfiguring their faces terribly, but they live a very beautiful family life, and are free from idolatry or counterfeit Christianity.

To penetrate the interior of Brasil, said Mr. Glass, is to be impressed by the superb natural wealth of the country "Nowhere in the world can young men find finer opportunities."

An Old Turkish Wedding.

Although a Canadian girl does not, as a rule, propose marriage to a man, she does see the face of her bridegroom before the event takes place.

This is denied the interested parties in some of the old Turkish villages, where ancient customs are still maintained.

When a girl has reached the age of fifteen she is considered to be a grown woman, and has to wear the yashmak, or national covering, to her face.

The young maiden having attained this stage, the mother and female relatives of eligible young men call and propose their candidate as a suitable husband for the girl.

The parents talk over the matter, and, when they agree, the girl is informed that she will shortly be the wife of a man who has never seen her, or whom she has never seen.

The elected bridegroom then goes to the high priest, and declares, in writing, that he values his wife at so many head of cattle as are appropriate, in addition to a loaf of bread daily, the whole of which the wife takes in the event of divorce.

The wedding is preceded by three days of celebration at the bridegroom's house, where his male friends feast, drink, dance, and sing. On the fourth day the bride and her relations leave to go to his house.

Usually the bridal procession consists of three parts, the first being a gaudily decorated cart on which is piled the bride's dower of furniture, etc. Then follow the relations, and lastly a heavily curtained sedan chair containing the bride herself.

Only after the guests have gone does the bridegroom uncover his wife's face.

The Seven Wonders.

The seven wonders of the ancient world were usually held to be the Pyramids of Egypt; the Hanging Gardens of Babylon; the Mausoleum at Halicarnassus (erected by Queen Artemisia II. of Caria to the memory of her husband, Mausolus); the Temple of Diana at Ephesus; the Colossus of Rhodes; the Statue of Jove (also called Jupiter or Zeus) at Olympia, by Phidias; and the Pharos of Alexandria (a lighthouse of white marble erected by Ptolemy Philadelphus on the island of Pharos, at the entrance to the port of Alexandria; this was the first light house, and the name Pharos was afterwards given to lighthouses in general.)

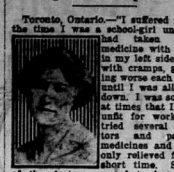
The seven wonders of the middle ages were the Coliseum at Rome, the Catacombs of Alexandria, the Great Wall of China, the Leaning Tower of Pisa, the Porcelain Tower of Nanking, the Mosque of Sophia at Constantinople, and the Ruins of Stonehenge.

The seven wonders of the New World is an appellation sometimes conferred on the following natural objects in America: Niagara Falls, Yellowstone Park, Garden of the Gods, Mammoth Cave, Yosemite Valley, Giant Trees and Natural Bridge.

The seven wonders of the modern world, in the opinion of a large percentage of scientists ascertained in 1913 by Popular Mechanics' Magazine, are: Wireless Telegraphy, Telephone, Airplane, Radium, Antiseptics and Antitoxins, Spectrum Analysis and the X-rays.

YOUNG WOMEN WHO SUFFER

Letter Points Way Towards Relief—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



Toronto, Ontario.—"I suffered from the time I was a school-girl until I had taken your medicine with pain in my left side and with cramps, growling worse each year until I was all run down. I was so bad at times that I was unfit for work. I tried several doctors and patent medicines and was only relieved for a short time. Some of the doctors wanted to have an operation but my father objected. Finally I learned through my mother of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and how thankful I am that I tried it. I am relieved from pain and cramps and feel as if it has saved my life. You may use my letter to help other women as I am glad to recommend the medicine."—Mrs. H. A. Goodman, 14 Rockvale Ave., Toronto, Ontario.

WHY DO WE LAUGH?

What Is It Constitutes the Comic Spirit?

"What do we mean when we say that a situation or an individual is funny?" asks Mr. Sidney Dark, in "John o' London's Weekly." "What is it exactly that makes us laugh when we read a Dickens novel or an essay by Mr. Chesterton, when we watch the antics of a clown, or see some unusual situation in the street? In his essay 'On the Idea of Comedy and of the Uses of the Comic Spirit,' Meredith says—

"'When they (men) wax out of proportion, overblown, affected, pretentious, bombastical, hypocritical, pedantic, fantastically delicate; whenever it sees them self-deceived or hoodwinked, given to run riot in idolatries, drifting into vanities, congregating in absurdities, planning shortsightedly, plotting dementedly; whenever they are at variance with their professions, and violate the unwritten but perceptible laws binding them in consideration one to another; whenever they offend sound reason, fair justice, are false in humility or mined with conceit, individually, or in the bulk—the Spirit overhead will look humanely malign and cast an oblique light on them, followed by volleys of silvery laughter. That is the Comic Spirit.'

"I am not quite certain that this Meredithian formula is quite sufficient. It is true that Mr. Pecksniff is an architect and a hypocrite, and that Mr. Pecksniff is a definitely comic character not because he is an architect but because he is a hypocrite. Uriah Heep is a hypocrite, and his hypocrisy makes him, too, a comic character. But Meredith would seem to suggest that without what may be called the milder vices no character can really be comic. And this is evidently not so. Betsy Trotwood is a comic character, and none of the Meredith adjectives can be applied to her. Mr. Pecksniff and Sam Weller are as comic as Mr. Micawber and Mrs. Gamp, though they do not come within the Meredith definition, while Mr. Micawber and Mrs. Gamp most certainly do.

"We laugh, even the best of us, at the small misfortunes of other people. It is immensely funny to see a fat man running up a hill to catch a train and then missing it. On the other hand, there is nothing funny in the same misfortune happening to an old woman. Here one arrives at rather a difficulty, because both situations are definitely incongruous. We laugh at ignorance, a fact which is exploited by the circus clown who pretends to imitate the feats of the acrobat, only to fail every time. Laughing at ignorance is often cruel and ill-mannered, but all men and women are funny at some time or the other in their lives (some of us are always funny). It is only the very virtuous who can avoid laughing at their fellows. It ought to be part of our education to be taught that we cannot help being funny, and to accept the laughter of others as a tribute to our humanity."

DOGS IN TURKEY.

Canines of Constantinople Viewed by Traveler.

"I think, after a ten years' stay in Constantinople," says Mrs. Mary A. Poynter in her book, "When Turkey Was Turkey," "that all the dog stories of this place are true ones.

"The only thing that I have against the dogs is that their amiability towards man seems to be offset at times by their antagonism to and disagreements with one another. Otherwise they are to us one of the most interesting features of this Oriental city. They rarely go mad, they have been the city scavengers for hundreds of years, they are grateful for the least of favors. The city is divided off into hundreds of dog boats, as it were; each dog knows his own quarter and keeps to it; if one oversteps his boundary there is a furious barking, a general 'set-to,' and war to the bite! There are usually about twenty-five dogs to each quarter—say within a radius of two hundred yards. All the dogs born in each quarter are adopted by that special community at birth. They are defended at first, but as soon as they can stand on their wobbly little feet they are supposed to look out more or less for themselves.

"In the purely Moslem quarters the dogs are more numerous, fatter, and on better terms in general with man and each other. Where there are no fountains in the immediate locality great tins of water are put outside hospital doors, and other refreshments are bestowed upon the dogs at fairly frequent intervals. We live in Pera, the European quarter, and while all in our street have charitable inclinations towards the dogs one green-turbaned imam in particular comes out of his house across the way and feeds the dogs at least twice a day. It rather comforts us in summer, when we and our neighbors are away, to think that there is one who is always there, and who religiously ministers unto the dogs as well as unto his own faithful.

"I was credibly informed once that while dogs in ordinary keep each to his own quarter, there is a captain dog among them who goes from quarter to quarter at will. He is usually superior in size and dignity to the ordinary street dog, and is treated with the respect due to a commander. While these dogs, once aristocratic Byzantine canines, are now all classed as 'plain Constantinople street dogs,' they are still very varied as to size, color, and intelligence. When the shepherd, back among the hills, wants a faithful companion for himself, and an assistant of first ability to guard his fold, he comes to town and goes to a quarter where the dogs grow tall and wide and long, of a tawny gray as to color, with black noses, and great width between the eyes.

"On the streets these fine specimens are almost lost sight of in the crowd of lesser dog lights. That is to say, together, they are not so notable as noisy; separated they may become nobles of their kind."

To Holders of Five Year 5½ per cent Canada's Victory Bonds

Issued in 1917 and Maturing 1st December, 1922.

CONVERSION PROPOSALS

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers to holders of these bonds who desire to continue their investment in Dominion of Canada securities the privilege of exchanging the maturing bonds for new bonds bearing 5½ per cent interest, payable half yearly, of either of the following classes:—

(a) Five year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1927.

(b) Ten year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1932.

While the maturing bonds will carry interest to 1st December, 1922, the new bonds will commence to earn interest from 1st November, 1922, GIVING A BONUS OF A FULL MONTH'S INTEREST TO THOSE AVAILING THEMSELVES OF THE CONVERSION PRIVILEGE.

This offer is made to holders of the maturing bonds and is not open to other investors. The bonds to be issued under this proposal will be substantially of the same character as those which are maturing, except that the exemption from taxation does not apply to the new issue.

Dated at Ottawa, 8th August, 1922.

Holders of maturing bonds who wish to avail themselves of this conversion privilege should take their bonds AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE, BUT NOT LATER THAN SEPTEMBER 30th, to a Branch of any Chartered Bank in Canada and receive in exchange an official receipt for the bonds surrendered, containing an undertaking to deliver the corresponding bonds of the new issue.

Holders of maturing fully registered bonds, interest payable by cheque from Ottawa, will receive their December 1 interest cheque as usual. Holders of coupon bonds will detach and retain the last unmatured coupon before surrendering the bond itself for conversion purposes.

The surrendered bonds will be forwarded by banks to the Minister of Finance at Ottawa, where they will be exchanged for bonds of the new issue, in fully registered, or coupon registered or coupon bearer form carrying interest payable 1st May and 1st November of each year of the duration of the loan, the first interest payment accruing and payable 1st May, 1923. Bonds of the new issue will be sent to the banks for delivery immediately after the receipt of the surrendered bonds.

The bonds of the maturing issue which are not converted under this proposal will be paid off in cash on the 1st December, 1922.

W. S. FIELDING,
Minister of Finance.

The Government's Conversion Scheme.

The attention of the holders of the five and a half per cent. war loan bonds maturing December 1st, 1922, is directed to the offer of the Minister of Finance to renew the loan on favorable terms. The last Canadian loan was placed in New York at a satisfactory price. The Minister is making his present financial operation entirely a domestic one by offering to exchange the maturing bonds for new bonds bearing the same rate of interest, running for either five or ten years as the bondholder may prefer. A further inducement to the investor is that he receives a bonus of one month's interest. The terms offered are decidedly favorable to the investor and it is probable that a large part of the maturing loan will be renewed. Arrangements for the exchange of the bonds can be made at any branch of the chartered banks. Holders who do not wish to reinvest will be paid in cash on the 1st December.

Jackie was on an errand of mercy when he encountered an organ grinder and a monkey furnishing entertainment for a considerable group of people. The monkey's antics amused Jackie for a while, but when he saw that the money was not rolling in at a very rapid pace Jackie stepped into the breach. His talents for "shimmying" resulted in a flood of coins, to the great joy of the street musician. This is only one of the many amusing features of this new production, and Jackie demonstrates his right to be called a star.

ROCKWOOD WON TOURNAMENT

On Wednesday afternoon of last week ideal weather favored the lawn bowling return fixture which the Bowling Club of Rockwood Hospital had arranged with the Napanee Bowling Club. The spacious rinks were in splendid trim and played keenly.

In the afternoon play commenced about 3.30, four rinks being engaged. After the first game, a half hour's interval was utilized for light refreshments on the beautiful tennis lawn adjoining. At the end of the second series all the players adjourned to the main building where at 8 o'clock a substantial dinner was served.

Mr. Robinson, in the course of his remarks, as President of the Napanee Bowling Club, thanked Dr. Ryan for the surprisingly warm welcome accorded them. Rockwood's popular Superintendent, in his response echoed the fervent hope that this hugely-enjoyed outing will be but the forerunners of many others in the future.

FORD TO CLOSE WORKS

Strikes Are Commencing to Affect American Industries.

Over a Hundred Thousand Men Will Be Thrown Out of Work by Decision of Automobile Manufacturer—He Cannot Get Coal and Protests Against Advance in Price of Steel.

DETROIT, Aug. 28.—One hundred and five thousand employes of the Ford Motor Co. throughout the country will be without jobs after September 16.

In addition, several hundred thousand other workers employed in industries furnishing materials for the Ford plants will be affected.

Henry Ford gave these figures on Saturday in announcing that his three big motor plants located in Detroit suburbs and his assembling plants throughout the country would be closed on that date because of the coal shortage.

The announcement was the most severe blow that industrial Detroit has sustained since the industrial depression of two years ago. It means, according to Mr. Ford, that 75,000 men employed in the Highland Park, River Rouge and Dearborn plants of the company here will be without work. Thirty thousand others now working in the various assembling plants scattered throughout the entire country also will be thrown out of employment.

How long the machinery in the Ford plants is to be stilled will depend entirely upon the coal supply of the future, the Detroit manufacturer said.

Mr. Ford criticized the fuel distribution machinery, which, he said, had made it impossible for his railroad, the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton, to obtain sufficient fuel at the various junctions to keep his factories here supplied.

The price of steel and other materials also entered into the decision to suspend operations, Mr. Ford said, adding that he had received notice of an advance in steel prices to be made shortly.

In his stand against prices of coal and steel, the manufacturer took the same position that prompted his decision to cease operations two years ago—that prices asked were unwarranted, and that he would prefer a suspension of work and a greater financial loss to the payment of higher prices on materials.

Industry in the United States must "throw up its hands in surrender" within a few weeks, if the rail and coal strikes continue, Mr. Ford declared.

Mr. Ford held financial interests responsible for the industrial tie-up, declaring, the "money barons" were manipulating the labor unions, and that public officials, state and national, were impotent in the crisis. The deadlock in strike negotiations indicated, he declared, the existence of "a plot to unload the demoralized and run-down railroads on to the Government at their own bold the road and to mulct the people through excessive coal profits."

TWO MEN WERE KILLED.

Tragedy Occurred When Heavy Auto Turned Turtle.

ORILLIA, Aug. 28.—S. A. Sylvester, Toronto, and W. F. MacBean, Moose Jaw, Sask., are dead as a result of a motor car accident on Muskoka road, provincial highway, Friday night. W. H. Scott, 67 Indian road, Toronto, the other occupant of the car, miraculously escaped with only a few bruises.

Mr. Sylvester, it is stated, was driving north to spend the week-end with his wife, son and daughter in Dorset, and had often gone over the road before. Just beyond the G.T.R. crossing, two miles north of Orillia, he overtook a car going in the same direction. According to witnesses he sounded his horn and endeavored to pass, but the other car held the road and put on speed, both cars going very fast.

Mr. Sylvester, determined to pass, apparently turned out too far and struck the end of a cement culvert, which threw his car into a ditch. Both men in the front seat were killed instantly.

Mr. Sylvester was a member of Sylvester & Gilpin, insurance brokers, Toronto.

W. F. MacBean was president and managing director of the Robinson-MacBean, Ltd., the largest department store in Moose Jaw. He was born in Forest, Ont., 45 years ago, and went to Moose Jaw in 1898, where he had been very prominent in all forms of civic enterprise.

British Troops Ambushed.

QUEENSTOWN, Ireland, Aug. 28. —A party of seven British artillery men under Captain Kennedy, from Bere Island, in Bantry Bay, landed Friday from a launch on Whiddy Island to pay for the troops on the island. They had proceeded only a short distance when they fell into an ambush by rebels.

Fierce fighting ensued, and all the ambushing party were either killed or wounded. Captain Kennedy and most of the members of his party also were wounded, some of them seriously.

The object of the attack is believed to have been robbery.

Sweden Stays Wet.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 28.—Incomplete returns in the referendum on the question of prohibition indicate a strong tendency against prohibition. The ballot thus far reported is 485,000 voted wet, and 358,000 dry.

It was a day of great excitement throughout Sweden. In all the big cities the queues formed and in the thousands of people awaiting the returns. Street car traffice in Stockholm was suspended owing to the congestion in the streets.

Fire Threatens Rum.

CALAIS, France, Aug. 28. Fire, which broke out in one of the food sheds on the waterfront Friday night, was subdued before it reached 10,000 gallons of rum belonging to the British army, incident to which, it was feared would cause a catastrophe.

Hespeler Man Swindled.

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—While waiting for a train at the Union Station, Sunday night, William Fiddes, Hespeler, noticed two men matching coins in the smoking room. The game was explained to him and he was invited to "get in," but sad to relate when he "got out" he discovered that he had been separated from $50.

The two men were arrested late as an old friend whom they had not seen for a long time. During the first few minutes of play Fiddes had all the luck, which quickly vanished. The ante was raised from 25 cents to a dollar to enable him to get even with the game. Suddenly one of the men yelled "police," and disappeared in the crowd. Fiddes reported his loss to the police.

Round-to-World Flyers Quit.

WILL TAKE NO PROFIT

War Victims to Benefit From Lloyd George's Book.

Premier of Great Britain Intends to Write His Memoirs In Order to Answer His Critics, But He Will Not Accept Any of the Money Made by Sale of the Book.

LONDON, Aug. 28.All profits made by Premier Lloyd George on his war memoirs will be given to war charities. Authorized announcement of this has been made. It is regarded as certain that many books, pamphlets and articles attacking the Premier's conduct of the war have been published, especially recently. Some of them have been written for partisan reasons and distributed by partisan organizations hostile to the present Government. These publications contain distortions of fact calculated to mislead the public.

The Prime Minister feels impelled, therefore, to publish at the earliest moment his account of the great struggle. He has already made considerable progress with the writing of his story, and means to devote some part of his holiday to further prosecution of the work.

The Prime Minister feels unable to take any personal advantage for himself out of the story of the struggle and suffering of the nation during the great war, so he intends that the whole of the profits of the book shall be devoted to charities connected with relief of the suffering caused by the war.

In explanation of the Premier's decision the political correspondent of the Sunday Times writes:

"In the course of writing the book, in which during his holiday in Wales he has made very considerable progress, the Prime Minister has been so distressed by the poignancy of the suffering of which he has had to tell and by the terrible sacrifice of life and treasure in which he was involved in the struggle, that the idea of any personal gain in the matter became impossible to him. He would despise himself, he felt, if he allowed himself to think of the book in such terms. The story of the nation's sacrifice shall only be told for the nation's gain, was his decision, which had the fullest sympathy and endorsement from Dame Margaret Lloyd George.

"The Premier has, he feels, immensely lightened his task. As I have said, his pen has flowed very freely during his forthnight at Criccieth, and, provided he has a moderate amount of leisure during the remainder of the year, he does not think that the first volume will be ready for publication by the early spring. It is fully planned, and although the precise chapter arrangement he cannot yet be made public I understand that both in vividness of description and the fresh light it throws on the difficulties he had to face during the war it will not disappoint the keen expectations that its announcement has aroused."

The correspondent points out that the sacrifice on the part of Mr. Lloyd George is considerable. He is a poor man, apart from the £3,000 per annum from the Andrew Carnegie, his private means are inconsiderable, and there is no pension attached to his office.

Buried In Trench.

OSHAWA, Ont., Aug. 28.—When a tongue of earth separating an eight-foot trench, being dug for the Oshawa waterworks department, and a trench being made by the Hydo-Electric Power Commission on the Ritson road, collapsed, one town employe was buried alive, and two fellow-workmen completely covered with the exception of their heads. Help was close at hand, and the injured several minutes to extricate the men from their perilous position. Adam Lamont was removed to the Oshawa Hospital and now lies there with collar-bone broken in two places, and one rib on the left side broken. Others who were hurt, James Bowles received bruises to his right hip, but he was not detained when removed to the hospital. Peter Thomasina was also hurt and injured, he only suffering from a contusion of the right shoulder.

Town Engineer W. C. Smith states that no blame can be attached to anyone for the accident. The men were working eight feet below the level of the ground, when six feet of earth fell on them. Four sticks of dynamite had been used in the trench some hours before the accident, but there had been no dislodging of the earth following that operation. Timber was being delivered at the time of the accident to brace the sides of the trench and was to have been put in immediately.

Boy Shot Brother.

BRACEBRIDGE, Aug. 27. — A shooting accident occurred near Port Carling when Charles E. Donald, aged 16, shot Charles Donald, his life. He and his brother, Lawford, aged 18, were out shooting crows, when the former mistook the elder brother stumbled, causing the gun to discharge. The charge entered the brother's body.

Chicago Millionaire Dies.

Giant Gorillas Found.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—A race of giant gorillas which were believed to have become extinct has been discovered by Howard Ross, Provincial Commissioner in the southern province of Sierra Leone, in the course of his investigations into certain jungle atrocities that have continued since before the outbreak of the war.

The only specimen of this kind of gorilla ever before obtained for a museum is in South Kensington Natural History Museum. It is about nine feet in height.

The frequent disappearance of women and children from Sierra Leone villages was attributed to the "human leopards," one of the many native secret societies. Mr. Ross, whose administrative district borders this Liberian territory, did not believe this, however. He investigated the cases of kidnapping and mutilation. A hunting party was organized, and three huge gorillas were shot, whose skulls are now in London.

DENBIGH

Miss Cora Stein and Mr. W. Hickelson, of Ottawa, are enjoying a few weeks country life at the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Stein.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Glaeser, of Sault Ste. Marie, also spent a couple of weeks here visiting the former's parents, and other relatives, and have returned to their present home.

Mr. Henry Chatson, of Renfrew, who also enjoyed a pleasant visit among his relatives and former neighbors here at his native home, has returned to town.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Glaeser have arrived home from a visit to relatives and friends at Verona.

Mr. Oscar Kastner, who was employed nearly all sumer at the Ore Chimney Mines near Northbrook, has also returned.

Mr. S. T. Jones, of Hamilton, spent a few days in and around here, hoof installing lightning rods in the village and vicinity.

Wilson held a lamb again last Tuesday night on Mr. A. Lane's pasture field, and helped themselves to a liberal share of it. The remains of it were poisoned. Friday Mr. C. Stein went through his fields and found the carcas of a very large wolf. The find caused considerable excitement, and narly everybody in the village went to have a look at it.

CEDAR LODGE

(For last week)

A number of girls from Selby, Misses Annie and Essie McCutcheon, Jennie Pringle, Ethel Taite, Ruby Weese, and Grace Winter with Mrs. Sid. Pringle as chaperon, were fortunate enough to secure "Cedar Lodge," Beaver Lake, from August 1st to 8th.

The lodge is very pleasantly situated at the edge of a cedar grove on the south shore of the lake, with "Camp Restawhile" and "Kamps Kilkare and Komfort" near at hand.

Owing to the kindness of Mr. Richardson, Tamworth, in leaving his boat at the cottage, the girls had the use of two boats during their stay. Needless to say, these were not left idle. Boating was very popular among the young ladies and each of them considers that she deserves a diploma in rowing. Miss A. McCutcheon is also quite in the champion oar wielder. Miss E. McCutcheon, becoming bored with the tame, ordinary way of disembarking from boats, tried climbing over the bow, discovered that there were many thrills to be enjoyed by taking a plunge from that point. However, there was none courageous enough to follow her example.

Bathing proved a large part of the afternoons. When the lake was not too rough, the would-be boating champions row-ed to Sandy Beach on the north side of the lake to the "Sandbanks," which was a splendid place for beginners to learn to swim. Although none of the girls became expert in this branch of sport, they enjoyed as much as the onlookers, the attempts of others. Then, of course, the frequent journeys down to the abodes of the fishes, and the consequent swallowing of what seemed to be at least half of Beaver Lake.

As far as fishing was concerned the cottagers either had the good luck to possess poor fishing rods, or any sport, or else they were good sportswomen indeed. They managed to catch, and clean, enough fish to provide themselves supplied with all they could eat, in spite of the trying ordeal to such tender hearted creatures as having fish hooks with fat, juicy, innocent worms.

"Sing songs" in the evening were enjoyed by all, as well as the stunts which were put on one rainy evening. Greatly to everyone's sorrow, however, a rainy Saturday made it impossible to have the expected corn roast on the beach.

Camp was broken Tuesday evening to the intense regret of all those who had spent such a pleasant holiday at Cedar Lodge. Among the callers at the camp were Mr. and Mrs. J. Tate, Mrs. W. J. Winter and Master Claude, and Mr. S. Pringle, and Charles, of Selby; Misses Evelyn Frisken, Eileen Pringle, Mary Denison, Beulah Hudgins, and Messrs. Ross Winters, Geo. Robinson, Jack Sterling, Ross McConnell, Fred Jackson and Fraser Allen, on Sunday; Mr. Luman Mc-Cutcheon, Mr. C. Hudgins and D. Fitzpatrick, Monday; and Messrs. McCutcheon, McConnell and Jackson, Tuesday evening.

The September issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, now on sale, is one which should please the sportsman and the outdoors lover. It contains many attractive features, all of which should prove of interest. H. Mortimer Batten, whose work has a distinct prominence through the columns of this magazine, has an absorbing story, entitled "The Spell of the Canyon," which is a swiftly-moving tale, with plenty of action and not a few thrills. There are other good stories, also by Bonnycastle Dale's usual article, is one of decided merit. A special feature is the compilation of the open season for all game, large and small, in each province of the Dominion, and this information, being complete and in a compact, should be a boon to hunters and sportsmen everywhere. The Guns and Ammunition department, edited by Capt. Hoffman, easily upholds the splendid standards previously established, and that is a guarantee of value and quality. Robert Page Fishing Notes, with Queries and Answers, contain much material of importance to the angler, and this popular department again offers something good for the delectation of all those who pursue the finny beauties. The Kennel department, as well as the Trap and Photo departments, are of high merit, and there are many articles and reviews of too numerous to mention, which go to complete a magazine of quality plus quality. ROD AND GUN IN CANADA is published monthly by W. J. Taylor, Limited, at Woodstock, Ontario.

OFF TO A BIG START.

Toronto Exhibition Had Large Crowds for Opening.

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—With the note of expansion definitely struck in the matter of the new buildings and exhibits that is presented to the public, the Canadian National Exhibition opened on Saturday for its 45th session with what was officially known as Warriors' Day. The weather was wholly favorable, the attractions were in a splendid state of preparation, and, as if in appropriate recognition of the general progressiveness shown, and of the occasion honored, the attendance figures showed a substantial increase over those of the corresponding day last year, reaching a total of 71,000, in contrast to one of 65,000.

The gates opened promptly at eight o'clock in the morning, and, with their opening, the great fair was ready to enter upon its annual task of amusing and instructing its hundreds of thousands of visitors. The carpenter's hammer was still heard in a few isolated quarters, but, during the day its echoes almost entirely died away, and Exhibition city, in all the aspect of permanence which it assumes for a brief fortnight, was completed.

It fully maintains the traditions of beauty and brilliance which have grown up around it. The flower gardens are a rare example of the skillful gardeners' art. The buildings are gay with the sun shining from their domes and minarets, and the lawns are as yet brilliantly green. An added touch of color is given by the gorgeous uniforms of the West Indian bandsmen as they walk about in their scarlet and white dress. By night the entire grounds and scene are of dazzling brilliance that would be hard to surpass.

At eight o'clock a.m. the influx of visitors to the grounds commenced, headed by Alexander Jamieson, a 12-year-old Russian lad, who has been adopted by a Canadian soldier and who had lined up at 1 a.m. in order to be the first patron of this year's fair. He was followed by a steady stream of persons until, with the official opening of the buildings at nine o'clock, there was a very fair attendance within the grounds.

By 2.30 p.m. when the ceremonial opening by Lieutenant-Governor Cockshutt was scheduled to take place in the new Coliseum, fully 4,000 people had gathered in that auditorium. They heard a brief formal address by his honor that was rationally optimistic.

COAL MINERS TO VOTE.

Thursday Is Important Day In Nova Scotia Fields.

SYDNEY, N.S., Aug. 28. — Thursday, August 31, is the date set for a referendum of the 12,000 miners in Nova Scotia on the acceptance or rejection of the new wage agreement negotiated by the United Mine Workers' executive and officials of the British Empire Steel Corporation.

Announcement to this effect was made at the United Mine Workers' headquarters, Glace Bay, at noon on Saturday.

For the same reason, the striking miners are not being asked to resume work pending the outcome of the voting. Nor will the withdrawal of troops already in the strike area take place pending the referendum. Strong hopes are entertained here that the new scale will be endorsed by a large majority of the miners of the province, although there are said to be one or two large sections that are likely to call for the full demands of the 1922 strike.

The main advantages of the agreement, from the miners' standpoint are:

The unusual length of the contracts; the wiping out of the Sydney Mines differential; the inclusion in the union of the shot firers; restoration of the central agreement working conditions, making effective time and half and Sunday rates; all of which have been vigorously urged by the United Mine Workers for months past.

The strike is likely to be over by the end of the present week, competent observers say.

Sentiment in favor of the acceptance of the new wage scale seems hourly to be gaining strength in the coal fields, according to late reports reaching Sydney from many quarters.

Killed In Auto Crash.

HAMILTON, Aug. 28.—Miss Beatrice Powell, Port Dover, aged 20 years, was instantly killed on Sunday afternoon in an automobile collision on the Hamilton-Galt road, a few miles from Hamilton. Miss Powell, in company with John Falconer and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Crobie, Port Dover, had been motoring for the day and, driving along the Galt highway, an automobile owned by J. H. Armstrong, Dundas, backed out in front of the Port Dover car, and the machines crashed together. Terrible injuries were suffered by the young woman and she died in a few minutes The others were injured, but not seriously. Chief Clark was on the scene in a short time and made a complete investigation of the circumstances. An inquest has been decided on. The auto in which Miss Powell was riding was wrecked when it crashed into a ditch. The whole machine was broken or twisted beyond repair. Falconer was removed to the General Hospital later, but is not seriously injured.

Is It Anthracite?

SUDBURY, Aug. 28.—A. F. A. Coyne, the Toronto geologist, returned to Sudbury Sunday night from the coal fields at Larchwood, which he is developing at his own expense, despite the discouraging pronouncements of fellow-geologists.

On Friday afternoon Coyne claims that he and his seven miners struck a six-foot vein of coal of almost pure anthracite at a hitherto untouched part of the field.

Less Tax Collections.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Official totals of tax collections for the fiscal year 1922, made public by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, show that there was a falling off of $1,297,-905,978 from the previous year.

Collections from income and profits taxes for 1922 totalled $2,087,-946,243. As against $3,228,137,672, or a reduction of $1,140,191,428. The receipts for 1922 included payments of the third and fourth instalments of the 1920 taxes and of the first and second instalments of the 1921 taxes. There are also included various payments on account of additional assessments and amended returns of income and profits taxes for previous years, resulting from field investigation and office adjustments.

Peter B. Kyne

"Shall I see you fellows before the blow-off?"

"I scarcely think so."

"Then if you're through with me, I'll bid you all good-by and good luck. I'll have dinner with you in the palace Sunday evening."

"Taken."

"May I bring a guest?"

"By all means."

Webster shook hands with the trio and departed for his hotel. For the first time in many years he was heavy of heart, crushed. "Neddy Jerome was right," he soliloquized. "This is the last place on earth for me to have come to. I've made Neddy sore on me, and he's lost patience and put another man in the job he promised me; I've raised Billy's hopes sky-high and had to bet $40,000 to keep them there; I've been fool enough to fall in love with my friend's fiancee; I'm a human cat's paw, and the finest thing I can do now is to go out next Sunday morning with that machine gun company from Leber's warehouse and get killed."

CHAPTER XIV.

The following morning Webster informed Dolores fully of his interview with her brother and his confreres the night before, concealing from her only the fact that he was financing the revolution and his reasons for financing it. He was still depressed, and Dolores, observing his mood, forbore to intrude upon it. Accordingly she claimed the prerogative of her sex—a slight headache—and retreated to her room, in the privacy of which she was suddenly very much surprised to find herself weeping softly because John Stuart Webster was unhappy and didn't deserve to be.

It was impossible, however, for Webster long to remain impervious to the note of ridiculousness underlying the forthcoming tragic events. Here was a little 2x4 poverty-stricken hotbed of ignorance and intrigue calling itself a republic, a little stretch of country no larger than a couple of big western counties, about to indulge in the national pastime of civil war and unable to do it except by grace of an humble citizen of a sister republic!

Five or six thousand ignorant, ill-equipped, ill-drilled semi-brigands calling themselves soldiers, entrusted with the task of enabling one of their number to ride, horse and dog, over 1,000,000 people!

How farcical! No wonder Ricardo, with his northern viewpoint, approached his patriotic task with gayety, almost with contempt. And when Webster recalled that the about-to-be-born provisional government had casually borrowed from him the sum of forty thousand dollars in order to turn the trick—borrowing it, forsooth, in much the same spirit as a commuter boarding his train without the necessary fare hails a neighbor and borrows ten cents—his natural optimism asserted itself and he chuckled as in fancy he heard himself telling the story to Neddy Jerome and being branded a liar for his pains.

"Well, I've had one comfort ever since I first saw that girl," he reflected philosophically. "While I've never been so unhappy in all my life before, or had to tear my soul out by the roots so often, things have been coming my way so fast from other directions that I haven't had much opportunity to dwell on the matter. And for these compensating offsets, good Lord, I thank Thee."

He was John Stuart Webster again when Dolores saw him next; during the succeeding days his mood of cheerfulness and devil-may-care indifference never left him. And throughout that period of marking time Dolores was much in his society, a condition which he told himself was not to his liking but which, nevertheless, he could not obviate without seeming indifferent to her happiness. And to permit his friend's fiancee to languish in loneliness and heart-break did not appear to John Stuart Webster as the part of a true friend or a courtly gentleman—and he remembered that she had once called him that.

They rode together in the cool of the morning; they drove together on the Malecon in the cool of the evening; chaperoned by Don Juan Cafetero and a grinning Sobrantean, they went sharks fishing in Leber's launch; they played dominoes together; they discussed, throughout the long, lazy, quiet afternoons, when the remainder of their world retired for the siesta, books, art, men, women, and things.

And not once, throughout two weeks of camaraderie, did the heart-racked Webster forget for a single instant that he was the new friend, destined to become the old friend; never, to the girl's watchful eyes, did he betray the slightest disposition to establish their friendly relations on a closer basis.

Thus did the arrival of The Day find them. Toward sunset they rode out together along the bay shore and noted far out to sea the smear of smoke that marked the approach of La Estrellita—on schedule time.

"You will go aboard her tonight," Webster said very quietly to Dolores.

"And you?"

"I shall go aboard with you. I have arranged with Don Juan for him to stay ashore and to come out in Leber's launch with the first reliable news of the new conflict. If Ricardo wins the city, he wins the revolution, and you and I will then go ashore—to dine with him in the palace. If he loses the city, he loses the revolution, and we will both do well to remain aboard La Estrellita."

"And in that event, what will become of my brother?"

"I do not know; I forgot to ask him, but if he survives, I imagine he'll have some enough to know he's whipped and will retreat on San Bruno, fighting a rear guard action, embark aboard the steamer that brought his men there, and escape."

"I'm worried about Mr. Luther Jenks,"

"I have asked Mother Jenks to dine with us at 7:30 this evening, and have ordered a carriage to call for her. When she comes I'll tell her everything; then, if she wishes to stay ashore, I'll send her aboard the launch more than one such fracas and doesn't mind them at all, I dare say."

And in this Webster was right. Mother Jenks listened in profound silence, nodding her approval, as Webster related to her the story of the advent in the country of Ricardo Ruey and his plans, but without revealing the identity of Andrew Bowers.

At the conclusion of his recital the old publican merely said: "Gor' bl' me!"

After a silence she added: "My sainted 'Enery used to s'y the proper 'oddis for a white man in a bally row o' this nature was 40 to 1. Gor', but how my sainted 'Enery would henjoy bein' 'ere this night to 'elp with the guns." She sighed.

"How about a little bottle of wine to drink peace to your sainted Henry and luck to The Cause?" Webster suggested.

"That's wot I calls talkin'," Mother Jenks responded promptly, and Webster, gazing reflectively at the old lady's head, wondered why she had not been born a man.

Dolores, fearful for her benefactor's safety, urged Mother Jenks to accompany them out aboard La Estrellita, but the old dame indignantly refused, and when pressed for a reason gave it with the utmost frankness: "They'll be tykin' Sarros, an' when they tyke 'im they'll back him ag'in the same wall he backed my sainted 'Enery and your father against, my dear. I've a notion that your father's son'll let Mrs. Col. 'Enery Jenks come to the party."

At 10 o'clock Webster accompanied Mother Jenks home in the carriage, which he dismissed at El Buen Amigo —with instructions to return to the hotel while he continued afoot down the Calle San Rosario to the bay, where Leber's huge corrugated iron warehouse loomed darkly above high water mark. He slipped along in the deep shadow of the warehouse wall and out on the end of the little dock, where he satisfied himself that Leber's launch was at its moorings; then he went back to the warehouse and whistled softly, whereupon a man crawled out from under the structure and approached him. It was Don Juan Cafetero.

"They're all inside," he whispered and laid finger on lip. "They got in half an hour ago, an' divil a sowl the wiser save meself."

"Thank you, John. Now that I know the coast is clear and the launch ready, I'll go back to the hotel for Miss Ruey."

"Very well, sor," Don Juan replied, and crawled back under the warehouse.

Half an hour later the sound of hoof beats warned him of the approach of Webster and Dolores in a carriage, and he came forth, loaded in the launch such baggage as they had been enabled to bring, and held the gunwale of the boat while all passengers stepped aboard.

About a half a mile off shore Webster throttled down the motor until the launch barely made steerage way. "It would never do to go aboard the steamer before the fracas started ashore," he explained to Dolores. "That would indicate a guilty knowledge of coming events, and in the event of disaster to the rebel arms it is just possible Senor Sarros might have pull enough, if he hears of our flight six hours in advance of hostilities, to take us off the steamer and ask us to explain. So we'll just cruise slowly around and listen; the attack will come just before dawn; then shortly thereafter we can scurry out to the steamer and be welcomed aboard for the sake of the news we bring."

She did not answer, and Webster knew her thoughts were out where the arc lights on the outskirts of Buenaventura met the open country—out where the brother she could scarcely remember and whom, until a month previous, she had believed dead, would shortly muster his not too numerous followers.

In the darkness Webster could hear the click of her beads as she prayed; on the turtle deck forward Don Juan Cafetero sprawled, thinking perchance of his unlovely past and wondering what effect the events shortly to transpire ashore would have on his future. He wished Webster would relent and offer him a drink some time within the next twenty-four hours. In times of excitement like the present a man needs a drop to brace him up.

Five times the launch slipped lazily down the harbor along the straggling two mile water front; five times it loafed back. The moon, which was in the first quarter, sank. Then to Webster's alert ear there floated across the still waters the sound of a gentle purring—the music of an automatic. He set the launch in reverse Leber's little dock, and presently they saw the door of Leber's warehouse open. Men with lanterns streamed forth, lighting the way for others who bore between them heavy burdens.

"They're emplacing the machine guns in the motor-truck," he whispered to Dolores. "We will not have to wait long now. It's nearly 4 o'clock."

Again they backed out into the bay until they could see far out over the sleeping city to the hills beyond in the west. Presently along the side of those hills the headlight of a locomotive crept, creeping swiftly down grade until it disappeared in the lowlands.

A half hour passed; then to the south of the city a rocket flared skyward; almost instantly another flared from the west, followed presently by a murmur, scarcely audible, as of a muffled snare drum, punctuated presently by a louder, sharper, insistent puck-puck-puck that, had Webster but known it, was the work of a battery of Vickers rapid-fire gun throwing a stream of shells into the cantonments of the government troops on the fringe of the city.

Webster's pulse quickened. "There goes the 'tillery to the south, sor," Don Juan called, and even as he spoke, a shell burst gloriously over the government palace, the white walls of which were already looming the ladder of safety—the city, now faintly visible in the approaching dawn.

"That was to awaken our friend, Sarros," Webster cried. "I'll bet a buffalo nickel that's the old flares I noticed up your way, Don Juan, the night before last. There's another—and another."

The uproar swelled, the noise gradually drifting around the city from west to south, forming, seemingly, a semicircle of sound. "The government troops are up and doing now," Webster observed, and speeded up his motor. "I think it high time we played the part of frightened refugees. Maybe some bullets will strike our way. Some strays may drop out here in the bay."

He speeded the launch toward La Estrellita, and as the craft scraped in alongside the great steamer's companion landing, her skipper ran down the ladder to greet them and inquire eagerly of the trend of events ashore.

"We left in a hurry the instant it started," Webster explained. "As Americans, we didn't figure we had any interest in that scrap, either right or wrong." He bade Dolores run the landing stage, tossed their baggage after her and followed; Don Juan took the wheel, and the launch slid out and left them there.

At the head of the companion ladder Webster paused and turned for another look at Buenaventura. To the west three great fires now threw a lurid light skyward, mocking an equally lurid light to the east, that marked the approach of daylight. He smiled. "Those are the cantonment barracks burning," he whispered to Dolores. "Ricardo is keeping his word. He's driving the rats back into their own holes."

The weeks of clean living, of abstention from his wonted daily alcoholic ration, had inspired in Don Juan Cafetero a revival of his all but defunct interest in life; conversely, in these stirring times, he was sensible of an equally acute interest in Sobrantean politics, for he was Irish; and flabby indeed is that son of the Green Little Isle who, wherever he may be, declines to take a hand in any public argument. For the love of politics, like the love of home, is never dead in the Irish.

It is instinct with them—the heritage, perhaps, of centuries of oppression and suppression, which nurtures rather than stifles the yearning for place and power. Now as Don Juan turned Leber's launch shoreward and kicked the motor wide open, he, too, decried against the dawn the glare of the burning cantonments west of the city, and at the sight his pulse beat high with the lust of battle, the longing to be in at the death in this struggle, where the hopes and aspirations of those he loved were at stake.

Two months previously a revolution would have been a matter of extreme indifference to Don Juan; he would have reflected that it was merely the cuts trying to get in, and that if they succeeded, the sole benefit to the general public would be the privilege of paying the bill. Today, however, in the knowledge that he had an opportunity to fight beside white men and perchance even up some old scores with the Guardia Civil, it occurred suddenly to Don Juan that it would be a brave and virtuous act to cast his lot with the Ruey forces. He was a being reorganized and rebuilt, and it behooved him to do something to demonstrate his manhood.

Don Juan knew, of course, what should the rebels lose and he be captured, he would be executed; yet this contingency seemed a far-fetched one, in view of the fact that he had John Stuart Webster at his back, ready to finance his escape from the city. Also Don Juan had had an opportunity, in the hills above San Miguel de Padua, for a critical study of Ricardo Ruey and had come to the conclusion that at last a real man had come to liberate Ruey's native land. Don Juan had had no other evidence that John Stuart Webster was connected with the revolution, for had he not smuggled Ruey into the country? It was something to be the right-hand man of the president of a rich little country like Sobrante; it was also something to be as close to that right-hand man as Don Juan was to his master, Webster; consequently Don Juan and his sporting code whispered to Don Juan that it behooved him to demonstrate his loyalty with every means at his command, even unto his master's blood.

"Who knows," he cogitated as the launch bore him swiftly shoreward, "but what I'll acquit meself with honor and get a fine job undher the new administration? 'The Honorable Don Juan Cafetero,' then, be the same token, 'tis John Joseph Cafferty's wish, loss or draw, an' may the divil damn me if I fail him afther what he's done for me. Sure, if General Ruey was a crook as the gossips says, a finger will make me fefe politico. An' if he does—hoo-roo! Hoo-ray!"

With his imagination still running riot, Don Juan made the launch fast to the little dock, down which he ran straight to the warehouse, where the Ruey mercenaries were still congregated, busily wiping the factory grease from the weapons which had just been distributed to them from the packing cases. A sharp voice hailed him, he paused, panting, to find himself looking down the long blue barrel of a service pistol.

"Who are you, and what are you doing here?" the man behind the weapon demanded brusquely.

"I'm Private John J. Cafferty, the latest recruit to the Ruey army," Don Juan answered composedly. "Who did ye think I was? Private secretary to that divil Sarros? Man, dear, how's that gun in case, for God knows I'm nervous enough as it is. Have ye something ye could give me to fight wit,' avie?"

The man who had challenged him—a lank, swarthy individual from the Mexican border—looked him over with twinkling eyes. "You'll do, Cafferty, old timer," he drawled, "and if you don't, you'll wish you had. There's a man for every rifle just now, but I wouldn't be surprised if there'll be a right smart more rifles than men before a great while. Help yourself to the gun o' the first man that goes down; in the meantime, hop into that there truck and keep the cartridge belt for the machine guns full up. You're just-in time."

Without further ado Don Juan climbed into the truck. A little citadel of sheet steel had been built around the driver's seat, with a narrow slit in front through which she latter peered out. The body of the truck had been boxed in with the same material and housed two machine guns, emplaced, and a crew of half a dozen men crouched on the floor engaged in loading the belts. Four motor bicycles, with sturdy, specially-built side cars attached, and a machine gun in each side car, were waiting near by, together with a half-dozen country carts loaded with ammunition cases and drawn by horses.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

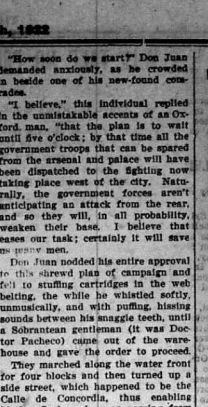
"How soon do we start?" Don Juan demanded anxiously, as he crowded in beside one of his new-found comrades.

"I believe," this individual replied in the unmistakable accents of an Oxford man, "that the plan is to wait until five o'clock; by that time all the government troops that can be spared from the arsenal and palace will have been dispatched to the fighting now taking place west of the city. Naturally, the government forces aren't anticipating an attack from the rear, and so they will, in all probability, weaken their base. I believe that ceases our task; certainly it will save us many men.

Don Juan nodded his entire approval to this shrewd plan of campaign and fell to stuffing cartridges in the web belting, the while he whistled softly, unmusically, and with puffing, blasing sounds between his snaggle teeth, until a Sobrantean gentleman (it was Doctor Pacheco) came out of the warehouse and gave the order to proceed.

They marched along the water front for four blocks and then turned up a side street, which happened to be the Calle de Concordia, thus enabling Mother Jenks, who was peering from the doorway of El Buen Amigo, to see them coming.

"Hah!" she muttered. "'Enery they're comin'. The worm is turnin',



"'Enery, They're Comin'."

'Enery; 15 years you've wyted for vengeance, my love, but tod'y you'll get it."

She waddled out into the street and held up her hand in a gesture as authoritative and imperious as that of a traffic officer. "Butter-cy salt" she ordered. She had heard the late 'Enery give that command often enough to have acquired the exact inflection necessary to make an impression upon men accustomed to obeying such a command whenever given. Instinctively the column slowed up; some of the Foreign Legion, old coast artillerists, no doubt, came to a halt with promptness and precision; all stared at her.

"'Ow about 'arf a dozen cases o' good brandy for the wounded?" Mother Jenks suggested. "An' 'ow about a bally old woman for a Red Cross nurse?"

"You're on, ma'am," the foreign leader replied promptly, and translated the old lady's suggestion to Dr. Pacheco, who accepted gracefully and thanked Mother Jenks in purest Castilian. So a detail of six men was told off to carry the six cases of brandy out of El Buen Amigo and load them on the ammunition carts; then Mother Jenks crowded up into the armored truck with the machine gun crew, and the column once more took up its line of rapid march.

The objective of this unsuspected force within the city was, as Ricardo Ruey shrewdly suspected it might be, poorly garrisoned. Usually a force of fully 500 men was stationed at the national arsenal, but the sharp, savage attack from the west, so sudden and unexpected, had thrown Sarros into a panic and left him no time to plan his defense carefully. His first thought had been to send all his available forces to support the troops on the front of the rebel attack, and it was tremendously important that this should be done very promptly, in view of the lack of information concerning the numerical force of the enemy; consequently he had reduced the arsenal force to 100 men and retained only his favorite troops of the guards and one company of the Fifteenth infantry to protect the palace.

Acting under hasty telephonic orders, the commanding officer at the cantonment barracks had detailed a few hundred men to fight a rear-guard action while the main army fell back in good order behind a line of entrenchments which swept in a wide arc around the city and offered an excellent substitute for breastworks. This position had scarcely been attained before the forces in advance of the rebels drove in the rear guards, and pending the capture of the arsenal, Ricardo realized his operations were at an impasse. Promptly he dug himself in, and the battle developed into a brisk game of give and take, involving meagre losses to both factions, but an appalling wastage of ammunition.

The arsenal, a large, modern concrete building with tremendously thick walls reinforced by steel, would have offered fairly good resistance to the average field battery. Surrounding it on all four sides was a reinforced concrete wall 30 feet high, inside and 25 feet from the ground, which afforded foot room for infantry which could use the top five feet of the wall for protection while firing over it. There was but one entrance, a heavy, barred steel gate which was always kept locked when it was not necessary to have it opened for ingress or egress. Given warning of an attack and with sufficient time to prepare for it, 100 of the right sort of fighting men could withstand an indefinite siege by a force not provided with artillery heavier than an ordinary field gun. With a full realization of this, therefore, Ricardo and his confreres had designed to accomplish by strategy that which could not be done by the limited forces at their command.

As the column approached the neighborhood of the arsenal, three detachments broke away from the main body and disappeared down side streets, to turn at right angles later and march parallel with the main command. Each of these detachments was accompanied by one unit of the motorcycle mounted machine gun battery with its white crew; two blocks beyond the arsenal square each detachment leader so disposed his men as to offer spirited resistance to any sortie that might be made by the troops from the palace in the hope of driving off the attackers of the arsenal.

Having thus provided for protection during its operations, the main body nominally under Dr. Pacheco but in reality commanded by the chief of the machine gun company, proceeded to operate. With the utmost assurance in the world the armored truck rolled down the street to the arsenal entrance, and there halted behind the impudent nose straight at the iron bars while the hidden chauffeur called loudly and profanely in Spanish upon the sentry to open the gate and let him in—that there was necessity for great hurry, since he had been sent down from the palace by the president himself, for machine guns to equip this armored motorcar. The sentry immediately called the officer of the guard, who peered out, observed nothing but the motortruck, which seemed far from dangerous, and without further ado inserted a huge key in the lock and turned the bolt. The sentry swung the double gates ajar, and with a prolonged and raucous toot of its horn the big car lonfed in. The sentry closed the gate again, while the officer stepped up to turn the key in the lock. Instead, he died with half a dozen pistol bullets through his body, and the sentry sprawled beside him.

The prolonged toot of the motorhorn had been the signal agreed upon to apprise the detachment waiting in a secluded back street that the truck was inside the arsenal wall. With a yell they swept out of the side street and down on the gate, through which they poured into the arsenal grounds. At sound of the first shot at the gate, the commandante of the garrison, which had been drawn up in a double rank for reveille roll call, realized he was attacked, and that swift measures were necessary. Fortunately for him, his men were standing at attention at the time, preparatory to receiving from him one of those ante-battle exhortations so dear to the Latin soul.

A sharp command, and the little garrison had fixed bayonets; another command, and they were in line of squads; before the autotruck could be swung sideways to permit a machine gun to play on the Sobranteans in close formation, the latter had thrown out a skirmish line and were charging; while from the guardhouse window, just inside the gate, a volley, poured into the unprotected rear of the truck following its passage through the gate, did deadly execution. The driver, a bullet through his back, sagged forward into his steel-clad citadel; both machine gun operators were wounded, and the truck was stalled. The situation was desperate.

"I'm a gone goose," mourned Don Juan Cafetero, and he leaped from the shambles to the ground, with some hazy notion of making his escape through the gate. He was too late. Two men, riding tandem on a motorcycle with a machine gun in the specially constructed side-car, appeared in the entrance and leaped off; almost before Don Juan had time to dodge behind the motortruck to escape possible wild bullets, the machine gun was sweeping the oncoming skirmish line. Don Juan cheered as man after man of the garrison pitched on his face, for the odds were rapidly being evened up, but he thought the climax of the men charging through the gate to support the machine gun. Out into the arsenal yard they swept, forcing the machine gun crew to cease firing because of the danger of killing their own men; with a shock bayonet met bayonet in the center of the yard, and the issue was up for prompt and final decision.

Prevention of Tuberculosis In Poultry.

It is absolutely useless to treat poultry which is suffering from tuberculosis with any sort of medicine or patent poultry tonics. Preparations which guarantee to cure this disease are pronounced frauds by scientists. Once the bird is infected there is no cure. All effort should be directed to prevent the healthy birds from contracting the disease.

If the flock is small and not of great value and if several birds have died or are known to be affected, it would probably be the part of wisdom to destroy the whole flock and start over again. The poultry house should be scrubbed out with good disinfectant and the walls whitewashed. If the floor of the house is dirt, remove about six inches and bury it out of the way. Resurface with fresh, clean soil. If the floor is well made of either concrete, tile or wood, soak thoroughly with disinfectant. If the floor is not of good material or hard to clean, lay a new one over the old. Turn over the soil in the runs. Boil drinking cups and cleanse all other utensils. After this is well done, secure the new birds, being very careful to purchase them from a flock which is free from the disease.

If the flock is large or valuable and it is decided to attempt eradication without destroying all the fowls, great care and attention, even to the smallest details, are necessary. One will, of course, overlook some of the diseased birds on the first examination, but they may be observed later on when the symptoms are better developed. Keep the floor as free from drops as possible, and clean out and disinfect at least once a week. Do not allow the young birds to run with the older ones, for they are easily infected. After the first general weeding out, watch the rest and as soon as one begins to appear diseased, remove it from the flock and keep it alone, and then if it develops further symptoms destroy it at once.

Good Fertilizer for Oats.

Eighty pound of acid phosphate per acre drilled in with oats in a five-year rotation of corn, oats, wheat, clover and timothy at the Ohio station has returned 9¾ bushels gain in crop yield, as an average for the 24 years of experiment.

While oats is generally left unfertilized in usual farm practice, since heavy fertilization causes the straw to grow rank and lodge, a moderate application of acid phosphate generally pays well on soils of low fertility. Oats on the station farm at Wooster has yielded 32 bushels from this light application of acid phosphate. Other fertilizers have proved less profitable than the acid phosphate.

Chick Rations.

A comparison of common grains as the sole source of feed for day-old chicks showed that wheat gave slightly better results in connection with weight than those obtained from corn, or oats, according to Kansas Experiment Station. The use of cabbage gave fairly good results as a vitamine source, ranking in this regard above carrots. The feeding of tomatoes failed to prevent leg weakness. The use of commercial chick feeds made up partly of weed seeds was found undesirable. The vitamine content of eggs was shown to depend on the vitamine content of the feeds fed the hens.

SANITARY HEN YARDS.

How Common Disease of Poultry May Be Prevented.

During the past few years the increasing demand for eggs of a standard quality, and the high prices prevailing for this commodity, have led to an effort amongst poultry instructors and pioneers in poultry raising, to stimulate this industry by advocating the use of back yards in cities and waste ground in rural districts for maintaining a small flock of fowls. It has been shown that a decided profit can be made where ordinary precautions are taken in regard to feeding, cleanliness and selection of breeding stock.

With proper care, most common diseases can be prevented, and of all measures directed towards this end, sanitation plays the most important part.

This is especially true on small holdings where the runs are limited and must of necessity be used year after year. Where it is not possible to rotate runs, the entire surface, after being covered with a good coating of air-slaked lime, should be ploughed or spaded. This precaution serves to keep parasites such as tapeworms, roundworms, gapeworms, etc., in check by destroying the eggs, which are nearly always present in the soil. Droppings from fowls should never be spread on land to which chicks have access, and during the fly-breeding season all manure should be kept in covered boxes or treated with some good disinfectant before being put upon the land. This applies more particularly to small holdings and to plants devoted exclusively to raising poultry. All chicks which die should be burned, and it is a good plan to kill all weaklings and dispose of them in a similar manner. Close observation is essential to pick out ailing chicks or fowls, and these should be isolated from the remainder until the exact nature of the disorder is determined. Particular attention should be paid to the feed and drinking water, and where young chicks are concerned a daily scalding of the drinking fountains and feeding dishes will well repay such effort. Tuberculosis is a disease of adult fowls, and is less frequently observed in pullets than in older birds. Tuberculosis is usually introduced by buying pullets or stock from outside sources, and such a practice is to be discouraged except when purchasing from reputable poultrymen. Where exhibition stock is kept, all show birds should be segregated for at least two weeks upon their return from exhibitions, as such a precaution often safeguards the flock from a serious outbreak of chicken-pox. In introducing new breeding stock, even if from reputable sources, the practice of quarantine is a safe plan to follow.

The proper disinfection of fowl houses, etc.; the quarantine of recently imported fowls or those returning from shows; the elimination of spoiled feeds and impure drinking water; the sacrifice of ailing birds to determine the nature of the disorder, as well as the burning of all dead fowls, are measures which, if carefully followed, will do much to keep the flock in a healthy, vigorous state, and make the keeping of poultry a pleasant, profitable enterprise.

Tractors In West.

A questionnaire recently sent out by the Nor'West Farmer to owners of tractors in Western Canada elicited a great amount of valuable and interesting information. Forty-seven per cent. of the reports indicated that the tractor was growing in popularity; 13 per cent. that tractor was losing its popularity; 78 per cent. that banks adopted a more or less unfavorable attitude toward lending money to tractor owners or prospective purchaser; 15 per cent. favorable attitude by banks toward tractors; 13 per cent. anticipate a good demand for tractors in 1922; 40 per cent. a fair demand, and 23 per cent. a poor demand.

From actual reports of manufacturers and distributors, it has been computed that 3,428 tractors were sold in the three Prairie Provinces in 1921, as compared to 10,200 in 1920; 9,000 in 1919; 7,500 in 1918, and 5,000 in 1917. Saskatchewan being the largest grower of wheat naturally purchased the greatest number of machines, accounting in all for 1,655. Manitoba was second with 1,057 and Alberta third with 716. In addition 97 steam engines were purchased last year, 54 being bought by Saskatchewan, 30 by Manitoba and 13 by Alberta. The estimated total ownership of tractors in Western Canada in 1921 was 30,000, with an estimated value of $24,250,000. In fixing the valuation for 1921, allowance has been made for the general reduction in inventory values, as well as a substantial decrease on account of depreciation.

San Jose Scale Increasing.

During the last two or three years a good many people in the north with home orchards have believed that the San Jose scale was becoming extinct. As a matter of fact the sleet which persisted so long on the trees the winter of four years ago suffocated the scale just as does the lime-sulphur spray when applied. After that winter, many old trees revived and have grown well since then. Now the scale is catching up again and, unless we have another such sleet, lime-sulphur and scale-oil will have to be put on if the trees are to be saved. A still day is an ideal time to spray with lime-sulphur because it is easier to reach all parts of the tree when there is no wind.

VITAMINES IN PORK.

Scientists Say a Good Word for This Meat.

Ever since the discovery of the presence in certain foods of those mysterious beneficial substances now known as vitamines, it has been thought that they were to be found in animal tissue most abundantly in certain of the internal organs, especially the heart, liver and kidneys, but the Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture now announces that they exist in the muscle fibre of beef, veal, mutton, lamb and pork, and that pork is particularly well supplied with them.

Various cuts of the different kinds of meat were tried, and in every instance pork was found to be relatively rich in vitamines. Pork tenderloin, fresh ham, smoked ham and spiced boiled ham were tested and the results were much the same with all of them. Beef and veal were relatively lower, while the amounts contained in lamb varied a great deal.

The experimental work consisted in feeding tests with rats and pigeons. Growth was the determining factor in the case of rats. In pigeons deficiency of vitamines was indicated by the development of polyneuritis, a disease to which they are peculiarly susceptible. Feeds rich in vitamines are of great help in keeping them in health.

This new evidence of the distribution of vitamines in meats should not lead to the conclusion that certain meats are of low nutritive value because they are deficient in vitamines. Meat is one of our most important foods and would continue to be so even though it contained no vitamines.

Western Threshing Expenses.

One of the most serious difficulties faced by the Prairie farmer last year was the fact that in many cases his threshing bill was 25 per cent. or more of the total proceeds of the crop, says the Saskatoon Star. A considerable reduction in threshing costs should take place this year in view of reduced labor and material costs, but the thresh bill is likely to be an unduly high burden on the farmer until a complete change in the method of managing thresh work takes place.

Provided other conditions can be met, any farmer would be well advised to stack his grain and await the thresherman's convenience. The besetting sin of the West—a headlong rush to get the grain off the field and into the elevator—will probably be somewhat lessened by the existence of the Wheat Board this year. But many farmers are so hard pushed by creditors that they are in an awful rush to get their money, and they are not as careful as they should be to get all that is coming to them. The man who takes his time, gathers up his grain, cleans off his field, and peacefully goes ahead with his fall ploughing, while the plunging thresherman and his wasteful crew tear their way through the profits of his less careful neighbors, can, come Christmas, set his own price for threshing. So far as can be learned, the threshermen were the only people in Saskatchewan who made any money last year.

Pure-Bred Cattle in Canada.

Of all beef cattle in the United States, 3.02 per cent. are registered, the percentages by States ranging from .27 of 1 per cent. in Florida to 11.76 per cent. in Massachusetts. In Illinois the percentage is 5.73, the highest of the corn-belt States, while in Texas, the leading beef cattle State, it is 1.91. Of all farms reporting beef cattle to the Government, 11.20 per cent. report registered cattle. Utah has the highest percentage, 28.65, while Iowa leads the corn-belt States with 21.85 per cent. There are 53 per cent. as many registered bulls of all ages as there are of all beef bulls one year old and over. The census does not classify pure-bred cattle by age. For every 53 beef cows, two-year-olds and over, there is one registered beef bull or bull calf. Of all farms reporting beef cows, two-year-olds and over, 18 per cent. reported registered bulls.

WHERE ONE BLADE GREW

It is not always the best soil that yields the richest harvest. Much depends upon the man who cultivates the soil, and the measure of his success is the measure of his intelligent industry and thrift and ability to make the most of opportunity.

The successful farmer cultivates his money as carefully as he cultivates his land. He gets returns from his crops and he gets returns from his funds. This Bank in any part of the Dominion adds interest to the money saved by industrious farmers. Our nearest Branch is at your service.

FOR FANCY SUITS

Embroidered Woven Serges Are About to Be Put Forward.

Extreme Novelties Chiefly for Skirts With Plaits and Combined With Plain Material.

In London embroidered woven serges are about to be put forward for fancy suitings and three-pieced costumes. These extreme novelties are to be used chiefly for skirts with plaits, and combined with plain material which is sold to match. The embroidery patterns for colored stripes run vertically four inches apart on grounds of navy or black. The pattern is woven of silk threads in four or five colors, combining purple, silver, green, gold, yellow and rust. The pattern itself shows either cluny lace designs or simple geometric effects, the different colors running in stripes, leaving the plain ground to show up the outlines.

For next winter's coatings the steady run of plain velours will be varied with a series grooved in Jacquard pattern in plain colors. These heavyweight cloths come not only in the flowered grooves, but in grooved stripes and fancy checks. Brown predominate in this series, the range of Jacquards being fawn, mole, beaver, nigger, cinnamon and gray.

Mixture velours are used as elsewhere, and plain velours with a shadow stripe in contrasting color. The velours collection contains many checks, the most interesting being the very large shaded checks in several degrees of the same color, designed for coatings.

The gabardine series is made interesting by the introduction of striped materials, bands of rich colors on a neutral ground, such combinations as fawn, gray, slate and beaver, striped with blue, lemon, gold, poppy and black, each band containing black and two colors.

IS BEADED IN DAISY DESIGN

When a French voile in rose is beaded in a daisy design it becomes a charming afternoon frock. The model wears a hat of rose straw with clusters of frosted grapes.

FAD FOR COLORED BRACELETS

Bone or the Carved Ivory Armbands in White or Tints, Continue to Hold Favor.

Jewels match the costume to a marked degree. The fad for wearing many bracelets continues, the bracelets of bone or carved ivory in white and colors. A stunning afternoon costume in dull tomato chiffon was seen recently, the rich tone of the tomato set off by bone bracelets in dull red, green, orange and deep purple. Charming bracelets from France come in black, a delicate, almost transparent green and orange, with gay little elephants romping about their surface. The elephants are painted in white on the black bracelets and in black on the colored ones. Other arm trinkets show cunning little ivory or metal figures of animals and men hung on slender gold or silver chains. For the woman who travels much, or happens to be in places where she can pick up these trinkets, it is interesting to gather odd little pieces here and there.

Another item in keeping with the matching accessories is the vogue of the fancy glove, which marks a revival of a court style ffrom the days of the Medici and Valois rulers. Many of the effects are much the same as they were then, though the use of delicately scented perfumes in the making of the glove has been discarded.

For young pigs on pasture the self-feeder has given satisfactory results. Slightly more grain may be required, which is offset by economizing of labor.

The man who improves the live stock of a community or gives it a better variety of corn is deserving of praise as well as he who "plucks glory from the cannon's mouth."—W. A. Lloyd.

As thy days, so shall thy strength be.—Deut. 33-25; The very God of peace sanctify you wholly.—1 Thess. 5-23; Let us love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth. —1 John, 3-18; O how great is Thy goodness, which Thou hast laid up for them that fear Thee.—Ps. 31-19; The Lord is faithful who shall stablish you, and keep you from evil.—2 Thess. 3-3.

O faithless, unbelieving heart,
So slow to trust that tenderest Friend
Who aye will needful strength impart,
Who loving, loves unto the end.

Plain Talks - No. 8

DEAR PEOPLE,—

We desire to impress you with our thanks for your kind patronage. It is sure a pleasure to find new customers and still hang on to the old ones. Now, if your boots are well fixed, they are fixed with us; and if they are fixed with us, they are fixed well! So beware of imitators who would pose as practical shoe makers, and come to the old reliable stand where materials and workmanship are always of the same high standard, for with us the price alone is low. (Fair dealing) is our motto, and reductions in price were made by us first.

We lead, others follow.

WELCOME, WINTRY WINDS?

What did you do with your summer's dough?
It's gone; and you hate to tell.
Soon we'll have both hail and snow,
It sure would make one yell.
But I we should worry! let it come,
The wintry winds we'll greet,
For we were shod at the Hospital
And we shall have dry feet.
Hog! Dog! nor devil, do we fear,
For our understanding's good;
Our sox are dry, our feet are glad,
We did as wise fool's should.

"Gathered Along the Trail"

NAPANEE FAIR SEPT. 12th, 13th, 14th.

All three days will be mighty attractive this year.

Each hour will be interesting, as the attractions are vastly superior to previous Fairs.

The attendance on the FIRST DAY will be a test of your interest and appreciation of the work of the directors.

Let us make OPENING DAY the best day.

Teacher: "What is the plural of "Cameo?"
Scholar: "Camisoles."

"That young bride worships her husband, doesn't she?"

"Well, she places burnt offerings before him three times a day."

The Wednesday Half Holidays are over for this season. On Wednesday, August 30th, and each succeeding Wednesday our store will remain open until 5.30 p.m.

Labor Day, Monday, September 4th, our store will be closed all day.

Reading—'Riting—'Rithmetic Days are just over the hill. Buy Robinson's Wearing Apparel to wear on opening days... It will stay with you longer and look better than just ordinary lines.. You need not pay more money either. Let us show you, please.

S Stands for Sweaters Which every Boy and Girl needs

No one is too old or important to wear a Sweater. Nothing can be more attractive or serviceable.

We have at present very fine assortments in styles for Boys and Girl.

C Stands for a Costume a Dress or a Suit

With us we have always rather made a specialty of Boys' School Suits. Right now our Boys' Section is boasting of a specially reduced line.

We find that school girls look best in Separate Skirts and Middies. In Middies we have a particularly fine range of styles and sizes.

H Stands for Hosiery We have the kind that wears well

For playing football and basketball you need Stockings that will stand all sorts of twists, kicks, and strains.

We have them in good fast dyes.

All sizes, and at all popular prices.

O Stands for Overcoats are Heavy and Warm.

When the season is on and the cold weather is here we want you to remember that we carry the finest stock of Coats in Napanee for Girls as well as Boys.

Right now we are showing a fine selection of medium weight garments.

O Stands also for Ordinary whether in school or in store

Some pupils are like some stores, just "ordinary." They keep "ordinary" good attention, and make "ordinary" fair marks.

We could keep "ordinary" quality if we choose, but find the best we can get is none too good.

You get the best when you buy from us.

L Stands for Lustre not so familar with boys.

For a good wearing Skirt, for a serviceable Middy, a pleasing Dress, or a gym Skirt you will find no material more satisfactory than a good piece of Lustre.

To be had in Navy Blue at 85c. per yard.
In Saxe, Grey and Green at $1.50 per yard.
And in Black at $1.00 per yard.

W Stands for Weapons that you use most at school

Last year we made a decided "Hit" with our great big 5c. Scribbler value. We still have enough of these on hand to start you off for another year.

We are also featuring a real good lead pencil this season.

E Stands for Extra's too numerous to mention

All girls love Hair-Bows, Middy-Ties, Scarfs, Purses and Pins.

While boys require unlimited numbers of Ties, Collars, Belts and Shirts.

In these side lines, as in the main essentials, we are particular about the quality we offer you.

E Stands for Eastern, the name of a Boy's Cap

Eastern Brand made Caps for boys and young men represent the maximum of style and service at the minumum of cost. In these Caps you secure the latest styles of the season.

We invite you in to try them on.

K Stands for Kimona which every girl needs

At present we are showing a very fine range of Kimonas, made from Serptine Crepe, in a series of pleasing, harmonious colorings. These come ruffled with silk ribbons and embroidered in silk.

In colder weather our stock offers lovely heavy warm beacon cloth weights in picturesque colorings.

MOTHERS WHO ARE PLANNING FOR THE RE-OPENING OF SCHOOL

We have unbeatable values in Pure Wool Serge.

This ever correct material strikes the popular conception of right service in the making of garments for school wear. Our values are better than ever.

38 inch pure Wool Serge, fine twill, excellent weight; Navy, Black, Brown, Cardinal, Wine, Saxe. Extra value, 75c. per yard.

At 85c. per yard an unusual value, 38 inches wide, in Navy Blue.

Then again at 98c. per yard is a Serge value that represents a regular Robinson value, 50 inches wide. Colors Black, Navy, Saxe, Brown.

This is not a serge, but like serge in wearing qualities—PURE WOOL PANAMA—in dress weight, 50 inches wide. Colors Black, Navy, Cardinal, Saxe, Wine. Our special price $1.19 per yard.

At $1.98 per yard is a pure wool Botany Serge, soft in quality, in a weight suitable for Suit or Dress, 54 inches wide.

Other extra Botany Serge values at $2.48, $3.00 per yard.

It will save you money to become better acquainted with Robinson's Dress Goods values.

OPENING THE PAGES OF FASHION'S STYLE BOOK FOR AUTUMN

Tailored Coats are extremely fashionable.

Each season we find more Canadian manufacturers going to England, not only for materials, but for style as well.

The English appearing Tailored Coat, with its manish, well-groomed appearance, is securing a wonderful grip upon the minds of Canadian women. It appeals because it is so genuine, it is all cut from the collar to the hem. Its only ornamentation being the odd pleat in the back and on the pocket. Quite frequently the pocket is set in.

Every Coat has a belt.

At the present moment we are showing several Coats bearing such imposing names as Hurlingham, Buckingham, Chatsworth and Bromleigh.

These are made from warm, comfortable Tweeds that are extremely attractive looking.

Priced from $33.50 to $65.00.
